JEFFRIES WON IN A DREAM-FIGHT

(By Tad.)

New York, Dec. 1.—For the second time within a month Jim Jeffries has dreamed that he knocked Jack Johnson out in four rounds. A great many battles, of course, are settled in dreams. Bill Snyder dreamed that he knocked out Burns; Jim Corbett dreamed that he beat Fitz; and Con O'Kelly dreamed that he put Pat Conolly on his back in two minutes. Sometimes they come true and very often they repeat with the reverse effect.

Jeffries, however, is one of our best little dreamers. Before every big fight Jeff has at least two dreams concerning the result. He is extremely nervous just prior to a big go, and his troubled sleep is the result of these dreams. Thinking that the sporting world would like to know exactly what Jeff dreamed we wired the big fellow at Springfield, Ohio, and had him send us just what he could recall of the dream he had concerning Johnson. Here it is:

"Four rounds were all the fight went, and I won with a left hand hook to the jaw. As I remember the thing now, it was a very warm day. I had never fought in the open air before and the light kept me squinting all the time. Johnson and I tossed a coin for corners and he won, taking the chair with the sun to his back. In my corner the sun was right in my eyes, and Kid McCoy, who was behind me, held a parasol over my head as I sat there waiting for the bell to ring. He kept telling me funny stories. Tim McGrath was a great fellow for taking a man's mind off the fight by telling these stories, and McCoy had me giggling like a big kid at the jokes.

"I was a bit nervous at that. My first real fight in about seven years you know, and the mob, buzzing and looking at me, like gawks, made me fidgety. I don't remember about the first three rounds, except that I missed a lot. My eye wasn't right for distance. I could see Johnson's black, shining head in front of me, but every time I let go it seemed that he wasn't there. The sun was awfully warm on my head and shoulders. It reminded me of the night I fought Sharkey. They had about 10,000 electric lights over the ring for the moving pictures, and it was like fighting in an oven.

"Old Billy Jordan was the referee—yes, I remember Bill hopping around. Seems funny having Jordan as referee, but I remember that we had a awful fuss over the referee and finally all hands decided that Billy was the one man who suited us all.

"The sun that way was low, and if I ever got that side of the ring where it hit me in the face always backed around until I had Johnson over there and had my back to it. "My mouth was swollen from jabs. I remember, and it felt as though a bee had stung me. Neither one of us was bleeding at all. I know that my lips bothered me, and the knuckles on my right hand were sore from where I belted Johnson upon the head. When I went to my corner in the third McCoy told me to slam when Johnson did, and that the chances of a clean punch were better if I could connect.

"We got close just after the bell and exchanged punches to the body. I know mine seemed to sting him, as he fell on my shoulder just for a second after we landed. I could hear a terrible shout. Someone, or rather all, in my corner were waving their hands to rush him. I was in and forced him toward his corner. He shot out his left at my nose again and I hooked the left over on his chin.

"There he goes," they yelled. He fell upon the ropes and just sank like a brick chimney hit in the middle by a cannon ball. His knees sagged and refused the weight of his body. His head hit the lower rope, and as Jordan counted ten seconds off I stood against the post in my corner. I could hear the howls, "Jeff wins, Jeff wins."

"I guess I was so excited that I went up and down like a leaf. I heard, "Jeff wins." I rubbed my eyes and sat up to listen. It was Berger on the phone in the hall telling Gots that I won a bet from him that we left Berger to decide. "Yes, Jeff wins," Berger kept saying, and then I jumped out of bed to tell the crowd the news. "I'm pretty good on dreams and think that this one will come true surely."

MICHIGAN USED PENNSY'S TRICKS TO BEAT HER

"Bill Hollenback's 1908 team profited greatly by the use of the forward pass, which it worked for amazing gains," says the Philadelphia North American. "Al Miller's 1909 eleven has been a victim of it. Lafayette played Penn to draw a week ago through the skillful execution of this play, and Michigan beat Penn through the same agency. Both were of stunning ingenuity, the plans being disguised by fake formations.

"In this year's game Michigan lined for a placement kick. The pass was very bad, but Wassmund scooped it up and unexpectedly threw it to Allerdice.

"The whole Penn team had rushed through with the purpose of blocking the anticipated placement goal.

"Allerdice merely made a long pass to the incomparable Magdison, who carried the ball 75 yards. In two tries Michigan went over the line for its first touchdown.

"After the first touchdown Penn expected that Michigan would constantly try a trick, with the result that the Wolverines glowed through Penn for 72 yards without a break, which gave some idea of the Ann Arbor offensive power."

JUAREZ MEETING TO OPEN GATES TODAY

Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, Nov. 30.—The new racing plant Jockey club of Juarez, which will be thrown open to the public for the first time tomorrow, gives promise of being a great success. With the exception of a few finishing touches, which can be completed in a few days, the race course is up-to-date and equal to any on the New York circuit. The management has spared no expense in making it possible for the people of the Southwest and the neighbor republic of Mexico to witness high-class racing.

Over $400,000 has been spent on the course and grounds, and the when the club house is finished it is estimated the figures will come close to the half million mark.

The feature of the winter meet will be racing on Sunday, which is the banner day in Mexico. There will be racing six days a week, Monday being the off day.

The program of the meet was so arranged to make Sunday stake day, when the richest events will be contested for.

The management will add Monday, making seven racing days. Governor Creel of Chihuahua, Mexico, and staff and a large party of friends will attend the opening day as a representative of the Mexican government.

Horsemen have been liberal in entering horses. The twelve stakes, entries for which closed on October 7, have averaged forty entries, an exceptionally good showing for a new plant. Race men have extreme confidence in the backers of the Juarez meet.

Trainers who have worked their horses over the track pronounce it the fastest and safest on the continent.

For the opening day the Chihuahua handicap at 1 1/8 miles with a value of $2,000, will be the feature and a high class field will respond to the bugle.

Any horses that raced on the New York tracks and engaged for this event and a good race meeting should result. The other five events have filled well. There are now at the track more than 600 horses. There will be 14 books tomorrow, including the well known layers Geo. Rose, Billy Dubois and Sam Shen.
